INTRO TO JEREMIAH

The book of Jeremiah is the prophecy of a man divinely called in his youth from the priest-city of Anathoth. A heartbroken prophet with a heartbreaking message, Jeremiah labors for more than forty years proclaiming a message of doom to the stiff-necked people of Judah. Despised and persecuted by his countrymen, Jeremiah bathes his harsh prophecies in tears of compassion. His broken heart causes him to write a broken book, which is difficult to arrange chronologically or topically. But through his sermons and signs he faithfully declares that surrender to God’s will is the only way to avoid calamity.

Author

The book clearly states that Jeremiah is its author (1:1). He dictated all his prophecies to his secretary Baruch from the beginning of his ministry until the fourth year of Jehoiakim, and later sections were also composed. Only chapter 52, a supplement which is almost identical to 2 Kings 24:18–25:30, was evidently not written by Jeremiah.

Jeremiah was the son of Hilkiah the priest and lived about two miles north of Jerusalem in the town of Anathoth. As an object lesson to Judah, he was not allowed to marry (16:2). Because of his unwelcome message of divine judgment to be brought about through Babylonian invasion, he was threatened and imprisoned. The prophet survived the Babylonian assault on the city and was later taken to Egypt where he died.

Date

According to 36:1–3, the writing of portions of Jeremiah may be dated with some precision to the fourth year of Jehoiakim (605 B.C.), when Jeremiah was commanded by God to write down the prophetic messages he had delivered to the people over the previous twenty years. This material apparently corresponds to chapters 1–20. The remaining chapters contain prophecies and historical accounts in topical rather than chronological order, covering the second twenty to twenty-five years of Jeremiah’s ministry.

Jeremiah was a contemporary of Zephaniah, Habakkuk, Daniel, and Ezekiel, and his ministry stretched from c. 627 to c. 580 B.C. There were three stages in Jeremiah’s ministry. From 627 to 605 B.C. he prophesied while Judah was threatened by Assyria and Egypt. From 605 to 586 B.C. he proclaimed God’s judgment while Judah was threatened and besieged by Babylon. From 586 to about 580 B.C. he ministered in Jerusalem and Egypt after Judah’s downfall.

Themes and Literary Structure

Although Jeremiah is not easily arranged chronologically or thematically, its basic message is clear: the inevitable and inescapable judgment of God upon Israel for her rebellion and disobedience. The book may be divided into four main sections: the call of the prophet Jeremiah (ch. 1), prophecies to Judah (2:1–45:5), prophecies to the Gentiles (46:1–51:64), and the fall of Jerusalem (ch. 52).

Often known as the “weeping prophet,” Jeremiah faithfully proclaimed the divine condemnation of rebellious Judah for forty years. His sympathy and concern for his nation caused him to grieve deeply over the rebelliousness and imminent doom of his people.

Often Jeremiah desired to resign the prophetic office because of the harshness of his message and the unfriendly response that it elicited. It was Jeremiah’s difficult task to confront a people who seemed to become more insanely confident as the peril grew. They believed that God would not let Jerusalem fall because they possessed the temple and the one true religion.
Jeremiah was required to tell them that the terms of God’s covenant mandated punishment for disobedience.

The well-known section on the new covenant (chs. 30–33) reflects Jeremiah’s special interest in the covenant. All the prophets based their accusations and appeals on Israel’s covenant relationship with God, but Jeremiah does so much more explicitly. He does not fault the content of the old covenant, but recognizes that it must be internalized if it is to be lived out. Thus he prophesies the coming of a new covenant—one that will be written on the hearts of God’s people (31:31–34).

Babylonians Invade Palestine
Babylon overthrew Nineveh, the capital city of Assyria, in 612 B.C., and moved quickly to establish control over much of the ancient Near East. Defeating the Egyptians at the battle of Carchemish in 605 B.C., Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon moved against Palestine and deported important people such as Daniel to Babylon. Judah’s king Jehoiakim thus became a Babylonian vassal, but he rejected Jeremiah’s warnings in 601 B.C. and rebelled. Jehoiachin became Judah’s next king in 597 B.C., but was replaced by Zedekiah three months later when Nebuchadnezzar captured Jerusalem and deported Jehoiachin to Babylon. Zedekiah was the last king of Judah; his attempted alliance with Egypt led to Nebuchadnezzar’s occupation and overthrow of Jerusalem in 586 B.C.

LAMENTATIONS

Lamentations describes the funeral of a city. It is a tearstained portrait of the once-proud Jerusalem, now reduced to rubble by the invading Babylonian hordes. In a five-poem dirge, the author expresses the deep emotion of one who has seen the slaughter of many of his people, the enslavement of others, and the abject despair of the few survivors.

Author

Traditionally, this book has been attributed to the prophet Jeremiah, though he is not named in the text. The Greek translation of the Old Testament (the Septuagint) names Jeremiah as the author, and early church fathers such as Origen and Jerome agreed. Its present location after the book of Jeremiah in the English text reflects this judgment. Stylistic similarities between the two books also indicate that Jeremiah was quite possibly the author.

Date

The vivid and passionate tone of the author gives a strong impression of one who had just experienced the horrors of the destruction of the Holy City and the temple. This fact suggests a date of composition shortly after 586 B.C.

Themes and Literary Structure

The five chapters of Lamentations consist of five mournful poems which can be entitled: (1) the destruction of Jerusalem, (2) the anger of Yahweh, (3) the prayer for mercy, (4) the siege of Jerusalem, (5) the prayer for restoration.

The five poems each comprise a chapter, and the first four have an acrostic structure—a literary form that follows the pattern of the alphabet: the first verse or group of verses begins with the first letter of the alphabet, the second with the second, and so forth. Of course, this structure is almost impossible to reproduce in translation.

The first four chapters (poems) are dirges, loaded with pain and agony, except for two brief outbursts of faith and hope in 3:19–42 and 3:55–60. Chapter 5 is not quite as intense, but even there the throb of deep hurt is present. Throughout the poems, one is aware of theological insights typical of Jeremiah. Sharp contrasts and vivid comparisons are often repeated, and figurative language is abundant.

The Theme of Renewal

Throughout the book, the author of Lamentations couples a recognition of human sin and its consequences with profound hope in God and prayers that God will lead His people back to Him along the path of sorrow, repentance, hope, and faith.⁴

Lamentations ~ Chapters 1-5

1. Who is Jerusalem portrayed as in chapter one?

2. Why was Jerusalem called “the joy of the whole earth”, see Ps 48:2 & 50:2? (2:15)

3. How did the destruction of Jerusalem fulfill God’s word from old? (2:17)

4. What does it mean to bear the yoke in one’s youth? Why is it good? (3:27-33)

5. What was the LORD’s answer when Jeremiah called upon Him? (3:55-57)

6. What had the once compassionate women been brought to? (4:10)

7. What did God hold against the prophets and priests of Judah? (4:13-16)

8. How were they bearing the sins of their fathers who were dead? (5:7)

9. Had God utterly rejected His people? (5:21-22)
