Notes from the teacher: Studying the Gospel of John is both a daunting and an exhilarating undertaking. It has been several years since I studied and taught this Gospel, so I look forward to the study with great anticipation. In my judgment, John is by no means an easy book; it is significantly different from the synoptic Gospels - Matthew, Mark, and Luke. John makes a substantial and wonderful addition to our view and understanding of Jesus. It will take 2 quarters to cover the book or at least that's the time allotted this study. I do not have a workbook for guiding our study, but I will work to follow the above schedule so you can prepare each week by reading the designated sections section we will study together. Tim Jennings will join me in teaching, at least as long as we do Zoom. I think a conversation instead of a lecture will be more effective. The usual give and take of a classroom study is lost to a large degree by using Zoom. I'm hoping this arrangement will address that issue.
