Thinking About My Dad

Sunday is Father's Day and I'm preaching a lesson about "How to Be A Great Dad." But let's be honest. Father's day is just not as big a deal as Mother's Day! Restaurants are not as crowded. Phone circuits are not jammed. Hallmark's business is not as great as on Mother's Day. And even church attendance doesn't compare to Mother's Day!

But that's understandable, because typically fathers are not as sentimental as mothers. However, let me share a bit of sentiment as I think about my Dad who passed away 18 years ago and pay tribute to dads."

Memories

I grew up in the 50's and 60's. My father was a product of the depression and grew up on a farm. He knew the value of a dollar and the importance of work. He taught me to work. More than that he expected me to work and gave me chores to do. But my Dad did more than teach, he exemplified the work ethic in our home. He worked all day in the factory and then came home and worked in the field.

I was lucky to have a Dad who reverently and fervently gave thanks at the dinner table. While my Mom taught me to pray as a little boy, it is the memory of growing older and hearing my father pray that sticks in my mind. I was fortunate to have a father who knew the importance of spiritual things. Dad was the spiritual leader in our home. While my Mom had strong influence in Dad's early spiritual growth, there was no doubt who was the head and leader of our home. My Dad encouraged me to preach the gospel. He provided a car filled with gas on many occasions for me to go and preach.

Continued

My Dad was not a worldly, sophisticated man. He was a simple, no-nonsense, down to earth kind of man. And I thank God for the precious memory I have of him. My feelings, however, may be summed up by a little piece someone gave me entitled "Over the Years."

Age 4-My Daddy can do anything.

Age 8-Daddy doesn't know quite everything.

Age 12-Naturally father doesn't understand.

Age 14-Father? Hopelessly old-fashioned.

Age 21-What do you expect? He's out of date.

Age 25-He comes up with a good idea now and then.

Age 30-Must see what Dad thinks about it!

Age 40-Patience! Let's get Dad's input first.

Age 50-What would Dad think about that?

Age 60-I wish I could talk to Dad once more!

A Tribute

We have many fine fathers today. Yes, I know we have our faults. But I know a lot of men who take being a father seriously. Men who are working hard to provide for their families. Men who are trying to be good husbands and faithful Christians. We also have Dads who are struggling. Let's encourage them.

A Word to Sons & Daughters

Don't forget dear ole dad on Sunday. He may appear unsentimental, but deep down he desires your respect and yearns for your love. In his own way, he will appreciate your remembrance of him. Your affection. Your affirmation. The day will come when you will no longer be able to talk to him, to see him and to honor him. Take the time now before it is too late. I wish I could talk to my Dad today. But I have good memories of him. I wish the same for you.
