Do I Still Desire Jesus?

About a month ago an excellent observation was made during the invitation. Do you still need Jesus? Do you still desire Him? Most of us would easily answer Yes. But what is the reality?

To need something is to be in want without. In our sinful state, we needed Jesus to free us from the bondage of sin. But, once He did that, do we still need Him? And if so, for what?

To desire something is to long for and crave. To be in need of it. We long for His love, His salvation. But once we have it, do we still long for Him? And if so, why?

Our lives tell the true story. If you have ever been involved in the conversion of someone to the Gospel, then you know how they felt. How eager they were to learn, listen, and then willing to obey. But what happens 5, 10, 20 years later. How many of us are still as eager to learn, listen, and obey so many years after our conversion?

What happened? I thought we all agreed that, "Yes, we still need and desire Jesus." If so, why are we so willing to turn back to the world that we had left behind? Why are we so nonchalant about our faith and the seriousness that it needs?

Jesus said, "If you love Me, you will keep My commandments." Do you really still desire and need Him?
