Tired?

Over the last few months, I'm sure at some point you've hit a wall. We all have. You can only deal with constant anxiety and stress due to situations outside your control for so long before you become exhausted and need a break. Non-stop news about COVID19 and racial tension, and the current political climate is exhausting on all levels mental, emotional, and physical.

When you do need a break, what do you do? How do you de-stress? In my experience, many of the things we do claiming that we "need a break" are also habits that potentially cause further stress. For example: TV and screen time is often a go-to but can have negative consequences when overused. In some studies, people actually felt a lower motivation to return to work or activity after watching TV. Of course, we all know the unhealthy results of substance abuse such as alcohol or tobacco. Even food can become an escape from stress. I find it both ironic and sad that many of our own solutions to stress are actually ways in which we make life more dysfunctional.

So, what should we do? Jesus offers an invitation in Matthew 11 that sounds so inviting: "Come to me, all who labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." What is it about Jesus' rest that is different? It is different, right? Join us this morning as we explore what Jesus means when he says, "Come to me, all who labor...take my yoke upon you, and learn from me..."
